I. ANNOTATION

The course on “Corporate Social Responsibility & Business Ethics” is grounded in the leading thinking and practice about ethics and moral philosophy, based on a belief that business ethics is inherently interdisciplinary, the course is deeply connected to other disciplines of business, including management, leadership, strategy, finance and organizational behavior. The course is aimed to enable students to develop the critical skills and analytical frameworks essential to identify, characterize, and resolve ethical problems likely to arise in business context. CSR refers to the way a corporation achieves a balance among its economic, social, and environmental responsibilities in its operations so as to address shareholder and other stakeholder expectations. The course is focused on Stakeholder Management which is considered to be the most appropriate practical tool for CSR. Stakeholder management is an approach that increases the likelihood that decision makers will integrate ethical wisdom with management wisdom in all that they do. During the course students discuss and analyze the stakes and interests of the different corporate, stakeholder groups and work on business cases that focus on (1) identifying the various groups or individuals who have stakes in the firm or its actions, decisions, and practices, and (2) incorporating those stakeholders' concerns into the firm's strategic plans and daily operations. Through a variety of teaching tools and discussions on various practical cases, the course is designed to promote highly-engaged student participation.
